Trading Fees

Kalshi charges a percentage fee on the expected earnings on the contract. Expected earnings are calculated by multiplying the maximum potential earnings from the contract by the probability of you making these earnings. We compute this fee based on the number of contracts in a single trade, and then round up to the nearest cent. The fee for a trade of c contracts at price p are given as follows:

$$fee = roundup (14\% \times c \times p \times (1 - p))$$

We charge this fee only to “liquidity takers,” who place orders that match orders sitting on the orderbook to complete a trade. We do not charge a fee to “liquidity makers” who place an order that rests on the orderbook waiting to be matched.

Let’s say you purchase one contract for $0.55, you would potentially earn $0.45 in profits if you are correct. We multiply your potential earnings of $0.45 by the implied probability that you are correct (55%), which totals 0.2475. We charge 14% of that number as the fee and round up, so in this scenario, the fee is $0.04.

ACH Fees

There is a $.50 fee associated with ACH deposits from your bank account to your Kalshi account and a $2 fee for all withdrawals from your Kalshi account to your linked bank account.

Wire Fees

Fees for wire transfers vary from bank to bank. Kalshi does not charge any additional fees for wire transfers.
